Part 1 – Background Information on Philippines

Background

The Philippine Islands became a Spanish colony during the 16th century; they were ceded to the US in 1898 following the Spanish-American War. In 1935 the Philippines became a self-governing commonwealth. Manuel Quezon was elected president and was tasked with preparing the country for independence after a 10-year transition. In 1942 the islands fell under Japanese occupation during World War II, and US forces and Filipinos fought together during 1944-45 to regain control. On 4 July 1946 the Republic of the Philippines attained its independence. A 20-year rule by Ferdinand Marcos ended in 1986, when a “people power” movement in Manila (“EDSA 1”) forced him into exile and installed Corazon Aquino as president. Her presidency was hampered by several coup attempts that prevented a return to full political stability and economic development. Fidel Ramos was elected president in 1992. His administration was marked by increased stability and by progress on economic reforms. In 1992, the US closed its last military bases on the islands. Joseph Estrada was elected president in 1998. He was succeeded by his vice-president, Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, in January 2001 after Estrada’s stormy impeachment trial on corruption charges broke down and another “people power” movement (“EDSA 2”) demanded his resignation. Macapagal-Arroyo was elected to a six-year term as president in May 2004. Her presidency was marred by several corruption allegations but the Philippine economy was one of the few to avoid contraction following the 2008 global financial crisis, expanding each year of her administration. Benigno Aquino III was elected to a six-year term as president in May 2010 and was succeeded by Rodrigo Duterte in May 2016.

Geography and Climate

The Philippines are in the south eastern Asia archipelago between the Philippine sea and the south china sea, east of Vietnam. the climate is tropical with north east monsoons (November to April) and south west monsoons (May to October). the terrain is mostly mountains with narrow to extensive coastal lowlands. The lowest point being the Philippine sea with the highest point Mount Apo 2954 metres. The natural resources are timber, petroleum, nickel, cobalt, silver, gold, salt, copper. The population is concentrated where good farmlands lie; highest concentrations are northwest and south-central Luzon, the southeastern extension of Luzon, and the islands of the Visayan sea, particularly Cebu and Negros; Manila is home to one-eighth of the entire national population. For decades, the Philippine archipelago was reported as having 7,107 islands; in 2016, the national mapping authority reported that hundreds of new islands had been discovered and increased the number of islands to 7,641 - though not all of the new islands have been verified.

Population

As at February 2019 the population was estimated to be about 107,483,225.

Currency

The currency of the Philippines is the Peso (PHP) divided into Sentimos and in current circulation:-

Coins: 1, 5, 10, and 25 Sentimos and 1, 5, 10 Pesos

Notes: 20, 50, 100, 200, 500 and 1000 Pesos

Healthcare

The healthcare standards in the Philippines are considered to be good, especially due to reforms undergone in the public health sector over the last 25 years, and the popular private fee-for-service system.

All citizens are entitled to free healthcare under the Philippine Health Insurance Corporation. The Philippines has a public medical system with the option to either choose free, government-provided healthcare or purchase private healthcare from your own pocket.

The public healthcare system is delivered through public health and primary healthcare centres linked to peripheral barangay (local town) health centres. Around 40% of the hospitals in the Philippines are public.

The private health sector caters to 30% of the population and is based on North American medical models, and the majority of hospitals in the Philippines are privately run.

Economy

The economy has been relatively resilient to global economic shocks due to less exposure to troubled international securities, lower dependence on exports, relatively resilient domestic consumption, large remittances from about 10 million overseas Filipino workers and migrants, and a rapidly expanding outsourcing industry.

Economic growth has accelerated, averaging 6.1% per year from 2011 to 2016, compared with 4.5% under the Macapagal-Arroyo government; and competitiveness rankings have improved. Although the economy grew at a faster pace under the Aquino government, challenges to achieving more inclusive growth remain. The unemployment rate declined from 7.3% to 5.5% between 2010 and 2016 but the jobs are low paying and tedious. Underemployment hovers at around 18% to 19% of the employed. At least 40% of the employed work in the informal sector. Poverty afflicts more than a fifth of the population. More than 60% of the poor reside in rural areas, where the incidence of poverty (about 30%) is more severe - a challenge to raising rural farm and non-farm incomes.

Religion

The major religion in the Philippines is Roman Catholic Christianity, followed by Islam and other Christian minorities. In the Philippines, all religions are protected by the law, and no one religious belief is given priority over any other.

Language

There are many languages spoken in the Philippines, but the only official languages are Filipino and English.

Education

Primary school in the Philippines begins when children are five to six, and lasts for six years. This stage is mandatory for all Filipino children. The youngest students are typically taught in the local dialect. There are more than 170 languages spoken across the country. Students are introduced to English and Filipino as a foreign language during that time. Older children, from grade three onward, are typically taught in a mix of Filipino and English. The divide in language is usually by subject. Math and science are often taught in English, while the humanities are mostly taught in Filipino.

Public secondary schools do not pick their students; they're open to all students in the direct region. Private secondary schools, however, are completely different; they're often highly competitive and students must do well on their entrance examination score in order to be offered a place. Science High School admission is also based on placement in entrance exams.
