Fumigation of Imported and Exported Wooden Crates

Paraguay Government adopted ISPM-15 (International standards for Phytosanitary Measures Publication 15).

Guidelines for Regulating Wood Packaging Material in International Trade (aka NIFM-15) to standardize the treatment of wood packing materials used for the transport of goods.

All wood containers (Liftvans) that come into Uruguay must be fumigated against plagues, and with the control made properly identified. Basically the more relevant points are the following ones:

- The Ministry would apply a month of courtesy whenever the packing does not contain any plague
- The requirement is fulfilled by means of a seal in the wood. If the load comes from a non signatory country of the convention a sanitary certificate in paper must be done

- The treatment to the packing will be by the following procedures: a) by heat treatment at 56° in the center of the wood during 30 minutes, or b) with methyl Bromide (BR)
- Does not apply to: Particle plywood, boards, pieces smaller than 6mm thickness
- The woods carried by the trucks (propping, tops, etc) also must be treated
- Seals must be in two sides of the pallet of such form that always are visible
- Containers of Imports 'Door to Door' are to be verified in the deposit of the client
- The MGAP, in cases of reiteration of situations of not fulfilling the norm, could reject the entire shipment, not only the packing
- Signatory countries are: Argentina, Chile, Brazil, Paraguay and Uruguay

General Information on Uruguay

Background

Montevideo, founded by the Spanish in 1726 as a military stronghold, soon took advantage of its natural harbour to become an important commercial center. Claimed by Argentina but annexed by Brazil in 1821, Uruguay declared its independence four years later and secured its freedom in 1828 after a three-year struggle. The administrations of President Jose BATLLE in the early 20th century established widespread political, social, and economic reforms that established a statist tradition. A violent Marxist urban guerrilla movement named the Tupamaros, launched in the late 1960s, led Uruguay's president to cede control of the government to the military in 1973. By yearend, the rebels had been crushed, but the military continued to expand its hold over the government. Civilian rule was not restored until 1985. In 2004, the left-of-center Frente Amplio Coalition won national elections that effectively ended 170 years of political control previously held by the Colorado and Blanco parties. Uruguay's political and labour conditions are among the freest on the continent.

Geography

Uruguay is located in Southern South America, bordering the South Atlantic Ocean, between Argentina and Brazil.

Uruguay is the second-smallest South American country (after Suriname); most of the low-lying landscape (threequarters of the country) is grassland, ideal for cattle and sheep raising.

Climate

Uruguay is warm and temperate; freezing temperatures almost unknown.

Natural hazards are seasonally high winds (the pampero is a chilly and occasional violent wind that blows north from the Argentine pampas), droughts, floods; because of the absence of mountains, which act as weather barriers, all locations are particularly vulnerable to rapid changes from weather fronts.

Population

3,494,000 estimated.

Environmental Issues

There is water pollution from the meat packing / tannery industry; and there is inadequate solid / hazardous waste disposal.

International Disputes

In 2010, the ICJ ruled in favor of Uruguay's operation of two paper mills on the Uruguay River, which forms the border with Argentina; the two countries formed a joint pollution monitoring regime; uncontested boundary dispute between Brazil and Uruguay over Braziliera / Brasiliera Island in the Quarai / Cuareim River leaves the tripoint with Argentina in question; smuggling of firearms and narcotics continues to be an issue along the Uruguay-Brazil border.

Currency

Uruguayan pesos UYU.

Coins: 50c, $1, $2, $5, $10

Notes: $20, $50, $100, $200, $500, $1000, $2000

Economy

Uruguay has a free market economy characterized by an export-oriented agricultural sector, a well-educated workforce, and high levels of social spending. Uruguay has sought to expand trade within the Common Market of the South (Mercosur) and with non-Mercosur members, and President VAZQUEZ has maintained his predecessor's mix of pro-market policies and a strong social safety net.

Following financial difficulties in the late 1990s and early 2000s, Uruguay's economic growth averaged 8% annually during the period 2004-08. The 2008-09 global financial crisis put a brake on Uruguay's vigorous growth, which decelerated to 2.6% in 2009. Nevertheless, the country managed to avoid a recession and keep positive growth rates, mainly through higher public expenditure and investment; GDP growth reached 8.9% in 2010 but slowed in 2012-13 as a result of a renewed slowdown in the global economy and in Uruguay's main trade partners and Mercosur counterparts, Argentina and Brazil.

Education

Public education in Uruguay is free and compulsory for children aged 6 to 14. The country has traditionally boasted high levels of compliance with required education, as well as a large number of students who enrol in secondary school. As a result, Uruguay holds an impressive position in the Latin America community for its high literacy rate of approximately 96 percent.

All Uruguayan children are required by law to enter school at age six. From ages 6 to 12, they attend primary school. At age 12, they enter the first stage of secondary school, which lasts for two years. During this time, they are instructed in the "basics," such as language, mathematics, sciences, and history.

At age 15, students may opt for several advanced tracks, depending on their choice of vocation. For the next three to four years, students complete the bachellerito, which is similar to a high school diploma in the United States. Following completion of the bachellerito, graduates may proceed either to one of the country's three universities or attend special institutes related to their specific interests. All instruction in Uruguayan schools is delivered in Spanish, although English and Portuguese are often taught at the secondary levels, and students attending the universities may be trained in a number of international languages.

Religion

Roman Catholic 47.1%, non-Catholic Christians 11.1%, nondenominational 23.2%, Jewish 0.3%, atheist or agnostic 17.2%, other 1.1%.

Health

Inoculation regulations can change at short notice. Please take medical advice in the case of doubt. Where 'Sometimes' appears in the table above, precautions may be required, depending on the season and region visited.

A yellow fever vaccination certificate is required from <http://www.worldtravelguide.net/uruguay/health> arriving from an infected area.

Food and Drink

Mains water is considered safe to drink. Drinking water outside main cities and towns may be contaminated and sterilisation is advisable. Milk is pasteurised and dairy products are safe for consumption. Local meat, poultry, seafood, fruit and vegetables are generally considered safe to eat.

Other Risks

Vaccinations against tuberculosis and hepatitis B are sometimes advised.

Uruguay has an excellent medical service. Private health insurance is recommended.
