General Information on the Islamic Republic of Pakistan

Background

The Indus Valley civilization, one of the oldest in the world and dating back at least 5,000 years, spread over much of what is presently Pakistan. During the second millennium B.C., remnants of this culture fused with the migrating Indo-Aryan peoples. The area underwent successive invasions in subsequent centuries from the Persians, Greeks, Scythians, Arabs (who brought Islam), Afghans, and Turks. The Mughal Empire flourished in the 16th and 17th centuries; the British came to dominate the region in the 18th century. The separation in 1947 of British India into the Muslim state of Pakistan (with West and East sections) and largely Hindu India was never satisfactorily resolved, and India and Pakistan fought two wars - in 1947-48 and 1965 - over the disputed Kashmir territory. A third war between these countries in 1971 - in which India capitalised on Islamabad's marginalisation of Bengalis in Pakistani politics - resulted in East Pakistan becoming the separate nation of Bangladesh. In response to Indian nuclear weapons testing, Pakistan conducted its own tests in 1998. India-Pakistan relations have been rocky since the November 2008 Mumbai attacks, but both countries are taking small steps to put relations back on track.

In February 2008, Pakistan held parliamentary elections and in September 2008, after the resignation of former President MUSHARRAF, elected Asif Ali ZARDARI to the presidency. Pakistani government and military leaders are struggling to control domestic insurgents, many of whom are located in the tribal areas adjacent to the border with Afghanistan. In January 2012, Pakistan assumed a nonpermanent seat on the UN Security Council for the 2012-13 term.

Geography

Pakistan is situated in the north-west of the Indian subcontinent, and covers an area of about 800,000 square kilometers. The country is bounded to the west by Iran and to the south west by Afghanistan and there is a short frontier with China in the north east and a longer border with India to the east. To the south is the Arabian Sea.

Economy

Decades of internal political disputes and low levels of foreign investment have led to slow growth and underdevelopment in Pakistan. Agriculture accounts for more than one-fifth of output and two-fifths of employment. Textiles account for most of Pakistan's export earnings, and Pakistan's failure to expand a viable export base for other manufacturers has left the country vulnerable to shifts in world demand. Official unemployment is 6%, but this fails to capture the true picture, because much of the economy is informal and underemployment remains high. Over the past few years, low growth and high inflation, led by a spurt in food prices, have increased the amount of poverty - the UN Human Development Report estimated poverty in 2011 at almost 50% of the population. Inflation has worsened the situation, climbing from 7.7% in 2007 to more than 13% for 2011, before declining to 9.3% at year-end. As a result of political and economic instability, the Pakistani rupee has depreciated more than 40% since 2007. The government agreed to an International Monetary Fund. Standby Arrangement in November 2008 in response to a balance of payments crisis. Although the economy has stabilized since the crisis, it has failed to recover. Foreign investment has not returned, due to investor concerns related to governance, energy, security, and a slow-down in the global economy.

Remittances from overseas workers, averaging about $1 billion a month since March 2011, remain a bright spot for Pakistan. However, after a small current account surplus in fiscal year 2011 (July 2010/June 2011), Pakistan's current account turned to deficit in the second half of 2011, spurred by higher prices for imported oil and lower prices for exported cotton. Pakistan remains stuck in a low-income, low-growth trap, with growth averaging 2.9% per year from 2008 to 2011.

Pakistan must address long standing issues related to government revenues and energy production in order to spur the amount of economic growth that will be necessary to employ its growing population. Other long term challenges include expanding investment in education and healthcare, and reducing dependence on foreign donors.

Population

The population of Pakistan is 165 million with a growth rate of 2.09% and average life expectancy of 62 years.

Climate

The climate ranges between dry desert and tundra arctic conditions on the mountain tops however generally warm and rainfall is monsoonal.

Education

Most expatriates send their children to boarding schools in the home country once they have reached the age of 11-13. Kindergartens are run in Karachi and other main centres by British, Dutch, American and German communities. Many educated Pakistanis speak fluent English and send their children to fee-paying English medium schools and to universities abroad.

Housing

Generally, the standard of housing is good although the finish in bathrooms and kitchens and the standard of plumbing and wiring is not up to that in the west. Most houses and apartments are large, having three, but more usually four or five bedrooms, each with a shower or bathroom adjoining. Domestic staff quarters have separate access, although these are usually part of the house. Houses are usually let unfurnished and the majority have, a garage. Most leases are for one or two years and rent for the entire period may be payable in advance. Most families are extended and several generations live under the same roof. The exceptions are modern urban families who have their own house or flat.

Language

The national language is Urdu although it is spoken by only half the population. Linguist differences are found in the various parts of the country. Considerable numbers speak Punjabi, Sindhi, Pushty and Baluchi.

Medical Facilities

All medical treatment, hospitalisation, drugs etc. have to be paid for and it is essential to take out comprehensive medical insurance before departure. All major centres have a number of good Pakistani, American and European trained doctors and dentists available who are well qualified and have modern equipment.

Comprehensive medical insurance is available from:

- BUPA, 'Life Scheme' Tel: 01273 323 563

Currency

Pakistan has a decimal currency based on the Rupee (PKR) which is divided into one hundred paisa/Denominations in circulation are:

Notes: 1,2,5,10,100,500 and 1,000 rupees

Coins: 5,10,25 and 50 paisa

American Express is the most widely accepted card, MasterCard, visa and Diners Club card have more limited use.

Religion

Islam is the state religion and an estimated 97% of the population are Muslim. A minority, (about 20%) belong to the Shia sect but most are Sunni, with the mass of the rural population adhering to the mystical Barelvi branch of the Sunni sect. Religion plays a very important part in the lives of the people. Most women appear either dressed in the black, all-enveloping burquah or wearing the typically Pakistani dupatta or fine, long scarf in public. There are small Hindu (1.6%) and Christian (1.3%) communities.

Practicing Muslims observe the fast of Ramadan which ends with the two day feast of Eld-ul-Fitr. During the month of Ramadan, Muslims are not allowed to drink, eat or smoke between sunrise and sunset. Expatriates should take care not to give offence to those who are observing the fast for example by offering a visitor a cup of tea by drinking or smoking in his presence.

Social Customs

The five major ethnic groups are the Punjabis, the Baluchis, the Pathans, the Sindhus and the Mohajirs. Broadly speaking, Pakistanis can be divided into 'Urdu-Wallahs' i.e. those who speak their local language, wear local costume and are practicing Muslim, and 'English-Wallahs' i.e. those who speak English, wear western dress and are secular in outlook and go overseas to university.

Society is male-dominated, and only in the cities are women educated and part of the salaried work force. Muslims do not eat pork in any form and are prohibited from consuming alcohol.

Traditionally, everything including food and drink, should always be offered and accepted with the right hand only. Visitors should always sit with their feet firmly on the floor since it is considered impolite to show the soles of their feet. Pakistanis whom expatriates meet socially will generally have experience of Western ways; nevertheless, you should take care not to praise your host's possessions since a very strict Muslim may feel obliged to present them as a gift.

Many Muslim women are in purdah, particularly in the country districts, and wear a heavy veil in public. You are advised not to take photographs of Muslim women. At present the country is ruled by the Sharia, the law of the Koran. Penalties are strict and foreign nationals should take care not to offend against local customs.

Telephone

The domestic system is mediocre. The majority of business have, established their own private system since 1988. Services are still not readily available in rural areas, despite major improvements in trunk and urban systems.

Utilities

The electricity supply is generally 220v 50 cycles. However, voltage may fluctuate between 160 and 250 volts. Power cuts are frequent and prolonged in some areas. Plug fittings are 5 and 15 amp, 2 and 3 pin (round) and lamp fittings are normally the bayonet type. It is reported that European plugs generally do not fit, but supplies are available locally.

Bottled gas is often used in cooking. A piped supply is available in Islamabad and Karachi.

Water

Water pollution from raw sewage, industrial wastes, agricultural runoff and limited fresh natural resources mean a majority of the population does not have access to good clean water.
